Casa de Benavidez

Our Story

Over 55 years ago, newlyweds Paul and Rita Benavidez began to work on a dream. Both had developed their love & skills of cooking at early ages, a family restaurant seemed to dominate the dream they shared. With little money in those early years, extra hard work & planning were in order. The original family restaurant, then known as El Mexicano, opened just about a mile away from the present location. The business began as a very small "carry out" with only three tables inside the modest structure. Paul, Rita, daughter Paula & a newly hired dishwasher were full time employees with the three sons, Paul Jr., Mark & Glenn helping out in their free time.

The Benavidez El Mexicano was getting popular, thanks in part to their famous trademarked Sopaipilla Burger. This meant that they were getting busier. Paul was stockpiling used restaurant equipment in the foresight of expansion & his sons had quit their other jobs so they could focus on the dedicated restaurant full time. They had outgrown the small building that began the realization of their dream.

Paul searched for a new location. He found an old corner house, in what used to be known as the "Newlander Addition". It was nearly one hundred years old & included a half finished waterfall to the south of the two story structure. The back area of the house would be perfect for their take out business. When the deal was made, the Benavidez family moved from their old location & into the new one in just one day!

Rita was worried about having the carry out restaurant at the back of their house, but those worries soon faded, as business was once again growing strong. So strong, in fact, that the Benavidez family decided to open a full service restaurant in the front & keep the carry out business in the back. This is when the family operated restaurant had its name changed to "Casa de Benavidez".

Their dream of serving traditional New Mexican food in the surroundings of a beautiful garden & strolling musicians would eventually come true. The family & employees at Casa de Benavidez continue to offer excellent food in a delightful & peaceful atmosphere. We invite you to return with your family & friends again & again.....It's our pleasure to serve you.

The Benavidez family has been serving New Mexico for over 35 years
